

Understanding Everyday Workplace Interactions in the NHS

A research study by the University of Manchester

Are you a South Asian professional working in the NHS?

We want to hear about your experiences.

Researchers at the University of Manchester are conducting a study that seeks to understand everyday workplace interactions and experiences in the NHS.

We are interested in a wide range of experiences - including moments that felt positive, ambiguous, uncomfortable, or difficult to interpret.

Interested in taking part?

Contact:

Dr Saleema Kauser

Saleema.Kauser@manchester.ac.uk

This research is conducted independently by researchers at the University of Manchester. Funded by the British Academy / Leverhulme Small Research Grants Scheme

Ethical approval granted by the University of Manchester Research Ethics Committee

About the Study

This study seeks to understand how NHS professionals experience daily workplace dynamics, including inclusion, exclusion, and other everyday workplace interactions.

Your insights will help improve understanding of workplace culture and everyday professional experiences in healthcare organisations.

What's involved?

- > A confidential online interview
- > Approximately 60–90 minutes
- > Scheduled at a time convenient for you
- > Participation is voluntary and fully anonymised